

The Drama; By Mrs. Kendal: A Paper Read at the Congress of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, Birmingham, 1884 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Drama; By Mrs. Kendal: A Paper Read at the Congress of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, Birmingham, 1884 In dealing with the Drama within the necessarily brief limits of a Social Science Association paper, the great difficulty is to decide from what point of view so large a subject is to be treated. That it should have a place in your discussions seems appropriate enough, for assuredly there never was a time when the Theatre was more popular, or so much a topic of conversation, as now. The English people are indeed rapidly becoming alive to the fact that the progress and culture of a nation depend upon its diversions as well as upon its occupations, and as a matter of consequence the Dramatic Art is receiving an unprecedented meed of recognition.
